

Contents

About IFLA — V

Foreword — VI

Preface — IX

Acknowledgements — XVI

Statement of institutional affiliation — XVIII

List of Tables — XXXIV

List of Figures — XXXV

List of Acronyms, Initialisms and Abbreviations used in the text — XXXVII

Part I: Concepts

- 1 From local to global: the expanding horizons of libraries and related information organizations— 3
 - 1.1 Introduction — 3
 - 1.2 Periodization of library development — 4
 - 1.3 Libraries – from local to global horizons — 8
 - 1.4 Horizon 1: Local — 9
 - 1.5 Horizon 2: Imperial — 9
 - 1.6 Horizon 3: Universal — 11
 - 1.7 Horizon 4: National — 12
 - 1.8 Horizon 5: International — 13
 - 1.8.1 Internationalism — 14
 - 1.8.2 Responses of polity and community internationalists — 16
 - 1.8.3 Scholarly communication — 17
 - 1.8.4 International library conferences and cooperation — 18
 - 1.8.5 The ideal of universal bibliography — 20
 - 1.8.6 The inter-war period — 23
 - 1.8.7 Aftermath of the Second World War — 25
 - 1.8.8 UNESCO — 26

1.8.9	IFLA — 28
1.8.10	Promoting library development in developing countries — 29
1.8.11	Wider involvement — 30
1.8.12	Technological advances — 31
1.8.13	Internationalism following the Second World War — 32
1.9	Horizon 6: Global — 35
1.9.1	Impact of globalization — 36
1.9.2	Dematerialization — 39
1.9.3	Commodification — 41
1.9.4	Globalization and resource discovery — 43
1.9.5	Other impacts of globalization on LIS — 45
1.10	Conclusion — 47
2	A field of study and research — 49
2.1	Introduction — 49
2.2	Emergence of a professional literature — 50
2.3	Themes, genres, motives, and values — 51
2.3.1	Travel and exoticism — 52
2.3.2	Philanthropy and ameliorative motives — 53
2.3.3	Extending national influence — 54
2.3.4	Area studies — 55
2.3.5	International understanding — 55
2.3.6	Internationalism, internationalization and international cooperation — 56
2.3.7	Policy and advocacy documents — 59
2.3.8	Improving practice — 60
2.3.9	Perspective — 61
2.3.10	Advancing knowledge — 62
2.4	The literature of international librarianship — 66
2.4.1	Bibliographies and overviews — 66
2.4.2	Edited collections — 68
2.4.3	International and regional surveys — 70
2.4.4	Single-country studies — 70
2.4.5	Special topics — 71
2.4.6	The current state of the literature of international librarianship — 72
2.5	The literature of comparative librarianship — 73
2.5.1	Conceptual and methodological literature — 73
2.5.2	Comparative studies — 76

2.5.3	The current state of comparative librarianship —	80
2.6	Definition and scope of international librarianship —	81
2.7	Definition and scope of comparative librarianship —	86
2.7.1	The definition of Danton (1973) —	86
2.7.2	National, cultural or societal environments —	88
2.7.3	Cross-, inter-, trans-...cultural, national, societal —	90
2.7.4	Working definition —	91
2.8	Distinction between international and comparative librarianship —	91
2.9	The nation state, methodological nationalism and globalization —	93
2.10	Towards global library and information studies —	96
2.11	Conclusion —	98
3	Conceptual exploration —	100
3.1	Introduction —	100
3.2	The need for theory —	101
3.2.1	Naive empiricism —	101
3.2.2	Theory —	103
3.2.3	Grand and less grand theory —	105
3.2.4	Theory in international and comparative librarianship —	106
3.3	The library concept —	109
3.3.1	Documents —	109
3.3.2	Information —	111
3.3.3	Knowledge —	113
3.3.4	Users —	117
3.4	A universal concept? —	118
3.4.1	Elements of a definition —	119
3.4.2	The library as an agency —	120
3.4.3	Universality? —	121
3.5	The conduit metaphor: transmission as a conceptual framework —	124
3.6	Systems frameworks —	128
3.6.1	General systems theory —	129
3.6.2	Systems analysis —	130
3.6.3	Systemism —	133
3.6.4	Complexity —	135
3.6.5	Library systems —	135

3.6.6	The international dimension —	139
3.6.7	Infrastructure —	139
3.7	Ecosystems and the LIS environment —	141
3.7.1	Ecosystems —	142
3.7.2	Environmental factors —	144
3.7.3	Variation within countries —	147
3.7.4	The international and global environment —	147
3.8	Culture —	150
3.8.1	Dimensions of culture —	150
3.8.2	Cultural relativism —	154
3.9	Libraries and culture —	156
3.10	Conclusion —	159

Part II: Method

4	Preparing for research: metatheoretical considerations—	163
4.1	Introduction —	163
4.2	Method, methodology and metatheory —	164
4.2.1	Methods and methodology —	164
4.2.2	Metatheory —	165
4.3	Metatheory, methodology and methods: the Iceberg Model —	166
4.4	Metatheoretical dimensions —	168
4.5	Major research paradigms —	169
4.5.1	Positivism —	170
4.5.2	Postpositivism —	173
4.5.3	Interpretivism —	174
4.5.4	Other current paradigms —	175
4.6	The sociological dimension —	177
4.6.1	The work team —	180
4.6.2	The formal organization —	180
4.6.3	Disciplinary and paradigmatic influences —	182
4.6.4	The political system —	183
4.6.5	Culture —	184
4.6.6	Ethnocentrism —	186
4.6.7	Multinational research —	188
4.6.8	Language —	191
4.7	The teleological dimension —	192

4.7.1	Positivism and postpositivism — 193
4.7.2	Interpretivism — 193
4.7.3	Applied research — 195
4.7.4	Ameliorative studies — 196
4.7.5	Benchmarking studies — 198
4.7.6	“League tables” — 198
4.8	The ontological dimension — 200
4.8.1	Ontological stances — 201
4.8.2	Some ontological assumptions — 204
4.8.3	Some implications — 206
4.8.4	Ontology as classification or typology — 207
4.9	The epistemological dimension — 210
4.9.1	Knowledge as justified true belief — 210
4.9.2	Positivism and postpositivism — 211
4.9.3	Interpretivism — 213
4.9.4	Non-Western epistemologies — 214
4.9.5	Nomothetic and idiographic research — 215
4.9.6	Importance of epistemology — 217
4.10	The ethical dimension — 217
4.10.1	The “biomedical” ethical model — 218
4.10.2	Interpretivist critique of the “biomedical model” — 219
4.10.3	Non-utilitarian approaches — 220
4.10.4	Ethics in research involving indigenous people — 221
4.10.5	Ethics in cross-national and cross-cultural research collaboration — 223
4.10.6	Knowledge sharing — 224
4.11	Evaluation of metatheoretical assumptions — 225
4.11.1	Sociological dimension — 225
4.11.2	Teleological dimension — 226
4.11.3	Ontological dimension — 226
4.11.4	Epistemological dimension — 226
4.11.5	Ethical dimension — 227
4.11.6	General metatheoretical/paradigmatic stance — 227
4.12	Towards methodology — 228
5	Methodological decisions — 230
5.1	Introduction — 230
5.2	Methodological decisions and metatheory — 231
5.3	Quantitative and qualitative methodologies — 232

5.4	Mixed methods —	236
5.5	The comparative method —	239
5.5.1	Historical development —	239
5.5.2	Is there such a thing as “the comparative method”? —	242
5.5.3	The significance of “large macrosocial units” —	244
5.6	Theory and mechanics of comparison —	245
5.7	Terminology —	252
5.7.1	A data matrix —	252
5.7.2	Levels of analysis —	253
5.7.3	Cases and comparators —	257
5.8	Comparative strategy —	258
5.8.1	How many countries? —	259
5.8.2	Variable-oriented vs. case-oriented strategies —	260
5.9	Comparative research designs —	261
5.9.1	Single-country studies (case studies) —	261
5.9.2	Many-country comparisons —	263
5.9.3	Few-country comparisons —	267
5.10	Selection of countries —	271
5.10.1	Single-country studies (case studies) —	271
5.10.2	Many-country comparisons —	272
5.10.3	Few-country comparisons —	272
5.11	Typologies and country groupings —	277
5.12	Selecting an appropriate level of analysis —	280
5.13	The time dimension —	282
5.14	Evaluation of methodology —	285
5.14.1	Methodological sources —	285
5.14.2	Quantitative vs. qualitative approach —	285
5.14.3	Comparative research strategy —	285
5.14.4	Comparative research design —	286
5.14.5	Selection of countries —	286
5.14.6	Units of analysis —	286
5.14.7	Levels of analysis —	286
5.14.8	Time dimension —	287
5.15	Conclusion —	287
6	Method: procedures, techniques, instruments —	288
6.1	Introduction —	289
6.2	Data sources —	290
6.3	Concepts —	291

6.4	Defining concepts — 293
6.5	Concepts and defining attributes: the qualitative approach — 296
6.6	Variables and indicators: the quantitative approach — 298
6.7	Concepts across boundaries — 301
6.7.1	Concepts and language — 301
6.7.2	Can concepts “travel”? — 303
6.7.3	Equivalence — 304
6.8	Framing questions across cultures — 306
6.8.1	Varieties of English — 307
6.8.2	Translating questions — 308
6.8.3	Measurement equivalence — 310
6.9	Survey design and execution — 311
6.9.1	Sampling — 312
6.9.2	Self-administered questionnaires — 314
6.9.3	Interviewing — 315
6.9.4	Observation — 319
6.9.5	Coding and data processing — 320
6.10	Documentary sources — 321
6.11	Documents as primary sources — 322
6.11.1	Analysis of official and organizational documents — 322
6.11.2	Evaluating documents — 323
6.12	Content analysis — 325
6.13	Bibliometric and related analyses — 326
6.14	Secondary sources — 328
6.15	General country information — 329
6.16	International comparative data – general — 332
6.17	International comparative data – LIS — 338
6.18	Information on LIS in specific countries — 341
6.19	Information on international organizations — 342
6.20	Challenges in using secondary sources — 343
6.20.1	Origin and derivation — 344
6.20.2	Reliability and comparability — 345
6.20.3	Potential bias — 346
6.20.4	A note on language and the use of secondary sources — 348
6.21	Researching in other countries — 348
6.22	Evaluation of methods — 351
6.22.1	Language competence — 352
6.22.2	Conceptualization and operationalization — 352
6.22.3	Survey design and execution — 352
6.22.4	Documentary sources — 353

6.22.5	Practical challenges —	353
6.23	Conclusion —	353

Part III: Political economy

7	The political economy of LIS —	357
7.1	Introduction —	357
7.2	Political economy —	358
7.3	International political economy —	360
7.4	Civil society —	361
7.4.1	Non-governmental organizations —	363
7.4.2	NGOs and LIS —	366
7.4.3	Foundations —	367
7.5	The business sector —	369
7.5.1	Growth and power of the business sector —	370
7.5.2	Relations to government —	371
7.5.3	Corporate social responsibility —	372
7.5.4	Multinationals —	373
7.5.5	Relations with civil society —	374
7.6	The public sector —	375
7.6.1	Three illustrative cases —	376
	CASE A: Big Government —	377
	CASE B: Small Government —	378
	CASE C: Transitional economy —	379
7.6.2	Implications —	381
7.7	Intergovernmental organizations —	381
7.7.1	The United Nations and related organizations —	383
7.7.2	The “Bretton Woods institutions” —	385
7.7.3	Regional IGOs —	386
7.7.4	IGOs in international political economy —	387
7.8	The digital divide —	388
7.9	Information/knowledge as an economic good —	391
7.10	Information as a resource —	393
7.11	Intellectual property —	395
7.11.1	Definition and scope —	395
7.11.2	Purpose —	396
7.11.3	Stakeholders —	397

7.11.4	Copyright owners and their critics —	398
7.12	Intellectual property in international context —	400
7.12.1	Globalization and concentration of control —	400
7.12.2	Harmonization —	402
7.12.3	Impact on developing and emerging countries —	403
7.12.4	The drive to seek ever-stronger protection —	405
7.12.5	Intellectual property treaties —	406
7.12.6	Trade agreements —	407
7.13	Contesting intellectual property —	409
7.13.1	Information/knowledge as a public good —	410
7.13.2	Information for the public good —	411
7.13.3	The commons and its enclosure —	412
7.14	Conclusion —	414
8	Access to knowledge and global flows of information —	415
8.1	Introduction —	415
8.2	The access to knowledge movement —	416
8.3	Mitigating intellectual property restrictions —	419
8.4	Pushback: international advocacy —	421
8.4.1	Advocacy for A2K —	421
8.4.2	The WIPO Development Agenda —	422
8.4.3	Continuing advocacy at WIPO —	424
8.4.4	The 2030 agenda for sustainable development —	425
8.4.5	Access to the cultural record: orphan works and related materials —	426
8.5	Open access —	429
8.5.1	Emergence of open access —	429
8.5.2	Open access models —	431
8.5.3	Objections, advocacy, and promotion —	432
8.5.4	Predatory journals —	434
8.6	Other legal strategies —	435
8.6.1	Non-proprietary alternatives —	435
8.6.2	Avoidance —	436
8.7	Radical and extra-legal resistance —	436
8.8	Globalization and information flows —	438
8.9	Global information flows: North – South —	440
8.9.1	‘Old’ problems —	440
8.9.2	‘New’ problems —	441

- 8.9.3 North-South flow more broadly — 444
- 8.10 Global information flows: South – North — 446
- 8.10.1 Seven forms of South-North information flow — 446
- 8.10.2 Scholarly information — 449
- 8.11 Global information flows: South – South — 454
- 8.12 Global information flows: North – North — 457
- 8.13 Conclusion — 459

Part IV: Influence

- 9 International influence and diffusion of ideas in LIS — 463
 - 9.1 Introduction — 463
 - 9.2 Influence — 466
 - 9.3 Diffusion — 468
 - 9.3.1 Processes of cultural change — 469
 - 9.3.2 Types of diffusion — 470
 - 9.3.3 Diffusionism — 471
 - 9.3.4 Diffusionism and diffusion of innovations — 472
 - 9.4 Diffusion of innovations: the Rogers model — 473
 - 9.4.1 Rogers' four elements of diffusion — 473
 - 9.5 Limitations of the Rogers model — 477
 - 9.6 Other research traditions — 478
 - 9.6.1 The epidemic concept — 478
 - 9.6.2 Social cognition — 480
 - 9.6.3 Knowledge utilization — 480
 - 9.7 Diffusion in LIS — 482
 - 9.8 Diffusion in ICT and information systems — 485
 - 9.8.1 Micro level studies — 485
 - 9.8.2 Macro level studies — 488
 - 9.8.3 Alternative approaches — 490
 - 9.9 Diffusion of policy — 490
 - 9.9.1 Policy — 491
 - 9.9.2 Policy transfer and innovation — 493
 - 9.10 Policy transfer in applied social science disciplines — 494
 - 9.10.1 Political science — 495
 - 9.10.2 Sociology and social work — 496
 - 9.10.3 Public management — 497
 - 9.10.4 Business and management — 498
 - 9.10.5 Law — 500

9.11	Policy transfer in education —	501
9.11.1	Transfer: borrowing or learning? —	501
9.11.2	The model of Thomas and Postlethwaite —	502
9.11.3	The Phillips and Ochs model —	503
9.11.4	Context, initiative, and outcomes —	506
9.11.5	Other approaches —	509
9.11.6	The significance of transnational networks —	510
9.11.7	Globalization and convergence —	512
9.12	Towards a framework for studying transfer in LIS —	513
9.12.1	Context —	516
9.12.2	Sources (“Who”) —	517
9.12.3	Intermediaries —	517
9.12.4	The innovation —	517
9.12.5	The Agency/Channel/Process nexus —	519
9.12.6	Agency: which agents make things happen (or not happen)? —	519
9.12.7	Channels (“through which channels?”) —	520
9.12.8	Process (“with which process?”) —	520
9.12.9	Recipients (“to Whom”) —	522
9.12.10	Relations between sources, intermediaries and recipients —	522
9.12.11	Outcomes —	523
9.12.12	Beneficiaries —	523
9.13	Exhibit A: Le retard français —	524
9.13.1	Early American influence —	525
9.13.2	Awareness and responses to le retard français —	527
9.14	Conclusion —	531
10	Colonialism, development, and aid —	532
10.1	Introduction —	532
10.2	Colonization and colonialism —	533
10.2.1	Carving up the modern world —	534
10.2.2	Forms of colonialism —	536
10.2.3	The ideological dimension —	537
10.3	Political-economic consequences of colonialism —	539
10.4	Decolonization —	542
10.5	After colonialism —	544
10.5.1	Postcolonial —	545
10.5.2	Decolonization of the mind —	546
10.5.3	Imperialism and globalization —	547
10.5.4	Neocolonialism —	548
10.6	Developing countries —	549

10.6.1	Terminology —	549
10.6.2	Diversity —	551
10.6.3	Diverse colonial and postcolonial trajectories —	553
10.7	Poverty —	554
10.8	Development —	556
10.8.1	Definitions —	556
10.8.2	Measures of development —	557
10.9	Theories of development —	560
10.9.1	Modernization theory —	561
10.9.2	Theories of underdevelopment —	563
10.9.3	Human development —	565
10.9.4	MDGs and SDGs —	566
10.9.5	Castells —	568
10.9.6	Other theoretical approaches —	569
10.10	Development aid —	570
10.10.1	Definitions —	571
10.10.2	Framework for discussing development aid —	573
10.11	Donors —	573
10.11.1	Donors in LIS projects —	576
10.12	Donor motives —	578
10.12.1	Donor motives in LIS aid —	579
10.13	Forms of aid —	580
10.13.1	Forms of LIS aid —	583
10.14	Process: channels, intermediaries, agents —	584
10.14.1	Process issues in LIS aid —	586
10.15	Recipients —	586
10.15.1	Recipients of LIS aid —	588
10.16	Context —	589
10.16.1	Contextual factors in LIS aid —	590
10.17	Outcomes —	591
10.17.1	Outcomes and evaluation of LIS aid —	594
10.18	Conclusion —	596
11	LIS development and aid (1) —	597
11.1	Introduction —	597
11.2	LIS development questions —	598
11.2.1	What do we understand by LIS development? —	598
11.2.2	Assessing LIS development —	600

11.2.3	How does LIS development relate to national development? —	603
11.3	Factors influencing LIS development —	604
11.3.1	Which factors favour LIS development? —	604
11.3.2	Which factors inhibit LIS development? —	607
11.3.3	Generic factors —	609
11.3.4	Synchronic analysis of development factors —	610
11.4	LIS development trajectories —	613
11.4.1	General trends in library development —	613
11.4.2	Historical and political-economic factors —	614
11.4.3	Generalized LIS development trajectories —	615
11.5	Historically literate realms —	616
11.5.1	Early literacy —	616
11.5.2	Western incursions and influence —	617
11.5.3	Development following the Second World War —	619
11.6	Exhibit B: China —	621
11.7	Latin America —	625
11.7.1	Colonial rule in Latin America —	625
11.7.2	Post-colonial development in Latin America —	627
11.8	Former colonies of large-scale European settlement —	632
11.8.1	Early libraries in North America —	632
11.8.2	The British dominions —	633
11.8.3	Dominions with settler minorities —	635
11.8.4	Algeria —	637
11.9	Exhibit C: The Carnegie Corporation, Canada, and New Zealand —	638
11.9.1	The Carnegie Corporation of New York —	638
11.9.2	Canada: early library development —	640
11.9.3	U.S. foundations in Canada: the Carnegie Corporation —	641
11.9.4	U.S. foundations in Canada: the Rockefeller Foundation —	643
11.9.5	Impact of U.S. philanthropy in Canada —	643
11.9.6	The colonization of New Zealand —	644
11.9.7	British influence in New Zealand —	645
11.9.8	Stalled development of LIS in New Zealand —	646
11.9.9	The Carnegie Corporation in New Zealand —	646
11.9.10	Building a national library system in New Zealand —	648
11.9.11	Assessing U.S. influence in New Zealand —	649
11.9.12	Comparative comment —	651
11.10	Conclusion —	652

12	LIS development and aid (2) — 653
12.1	Introduction — 653
12.2	Former colonies of limited European settlement — 654
12.2.1	Pre-colonial conditions — 654
12.2.2	Colonization — 655
12.2.3	Initial impact of colonization on the cultural record — 656
12.2.4	Library development under colonial regimes — 657
12.2.5	Post-colonial library development — 660
12.2.6	LIS development aid — 662
12.2.7	Obstacles and deviations — 664
12.2.8	Critical reception of Western LIS — 665
12.2.9	Rethinking LIS in the South — 667
12.2.10	Western LIS assistance: cynical or well-intended? — 671
12.3	Exhibit D: Francophone Africa — 672
12.3.1	Colonial library development — 673
12.3.2	Public libraries and the dissemination of French culture — 674
12.3.3	Pervasive French influence — 677
12.3.4	Divergence of francophone and anglophone Africa — 677
12.4	The former Russian Empire and Soviet sphere of control — 678
12.4.1	Sovietization — 679
12.4.2	Post-Soviet LIS development — 681
12.4.3	Some conclusions — 686
12.5	Exhibit E: The European Union and Central and Eastern Europe — 687
12.5.1	Political background — 687
12.5.2	EU LIS programmes — 689
12.5.3	Political background to EU enlargement — 690
12.5.4	LIS-related co-operation with the CEE countries — 691
12.5.5	Beyond the European Union — 694
12.5.6	The Council of Europe — 695
12.5.7	Closing observations — 695
12.6	Five dimensions of LIS development and aid — 696
12.6.1	Personnel — 697
12.6.2	Clients — 701
12.6.3	Collections — 704
12.6.4	Technology — 707
12.6.5	Vision — 713
12.7	Systemic aid — 715
12.8	Conclusion — 718

13 Conclusion — 720

- 13.1 What have we learned? — 720
- 13.2 Reflections on the generalized development trajectories — 721
 - 13.2.1 Explaining the diversity of LIS trajectories — 722
 - 13.2.2 Internal factors — 722
 - 13.2.3 External factors — 727
- 13.3 Reflections on the use of theory — 729
- 13.4 Has international and comparative librarianship failed? — 731
- 13.5 Is there a future for international and comparative librarianship? — 733

Bibliography — 735

Index — 865